

YOUR FAMILY BRIEF

The Mental Load Brain-Dump

Get it out of your head and onto paper. Fifteen minutes, once.

1. Running in the background

Recurring stuff you're tracking without ever deciding to.

Subscriptions worth cancelling or about to renew · what's running low before it runs out (meds, printer ink, shoes getting tight) · standing appointments nobody's booked yet · errands that only get remembered when overdue

2. Only in your head

The things nobody else could find or figure out without asking you first.

Passwords and logins · everyone's sizes · where things actually live · who to call for what · anything a caregiver would need in an emergency

3. Coming up

Dates living in your memory instead of a calendar.

Forms due back · renewals · events only you're tracking · payments on a schedule the rest of the house doesn't see

4. Right now

If someone asked what's on your mind right now, what would you say?

5. What's slipping

The honest one.

What have you been meaning to do for weeks · what are you quietly hoping nobody asks about today
